

The person who abandoned this car won't be getting a phone call.

Will you?

Protect yourself by filing a seller's report with your local vehicle licensing office.

You can be held financially liable for towing and storage charges if someone who buys your vehicle is involved in an accident or abandons the vehicle before transferring the title into their name.

Filing a properly completed seller's report within five calendar days of selling, trading, gifting, or disposing of your vehicle in any way is required by law. It also can help protect you if your former vehicle is wrecked, dumped, ticketed, or involved in any other legal hassles that could cost you time and money to straighten out. The process is fast, only costs $3.50, and provides you with a receipt.
